You have the vote—vote for Shoppers

Forty years ago Friday American women won their long struggle for the right to vote. Since that day they have made vast changes in the American culture with the very thing men felt should exclude them from the right to make decisions and create policy—their femininity.

That word is the key to what has made living in America a pleasure rather than just an existence.

Everything created today is designed to pamper the gal at home, at work or at play. Even the colors on autos reflect feminine thinking. And, naturally, grocery stores would still be grocery stores without the constant desire of women for more convenience, more variety, higher quality, greater cleanliness and, with greater size of markets, lower prices through mass buying.

We men don't want to give you gals ALL the credit but we must admit that through your efforts our lives have become much more comfortable—and reasonable.

On the occasion of forty years of emancipation from under our thumbs, we men would like to congratulate—no—we'd like to thank you for what you've given us—your femininity.

See you next week.
